

Pony's Special Day

One day, Little Girl pulled her wagon out to Pony's Paddock. The wagon was full of good things. "Good morning, Pony," said Little Girl, "Today is a special day!"

She got a big bowl from her wagon. First she poured in oats. Then she poured in some applesauce. She mixed the oats and applesauce. The mix was very soft.

"What would you like to do today, Pony?" asked Little Girl. "You get to choose because it is your special day. Shall we go for a ride in the afternoon?"

Pony seemed to like that idea.

"Would you like to ride to the meadow or to the pond?" asked Little Girl. Pony swished her tail.

Little Girl added oat flour to the mix. She stirred. Soon the mix became stiff. She could hold a ball of mixture on her hand. She stuck a tiny carrot standing up in the top of the mixture. "Here's your cake, Pony!" said Little Girl.

Pony ate the whole cake.

What was the special day?
