

The One-Hundred and Nineteen Little Pigs and the Big Bad Wolf (The Good Parts)

Copyright Daroc Alden 2011 Licensed under a creative commons attribution license.

The first little pig said “I’ve read some books, I know how this next part goes. I’ll do it differently.” And went to purchase two industrial strength balloons. The first he filled with standard atmospheric mixture. The second he filled with hydrogen, but not very full. Then he put the first balloon in the second and said “Let’s see the wolf destroy a hydrogen house!”

The wolf crept up in the night and said “What on earth?” then crept away to the corner store. Then he bought a book of matches and a dry erase marker. He crept back and carefully wrote “Hindenburg” on the side of the house. Then he lit a match and threw it at the house.

The second little pig said “My brother, he was smart. I’ll build my house out of a non-flammable gas.” And built his house out of Helium.

The wolf crept up and noticed that the house had to be held down with cinderblocks. He cut the house free and pushed it into washington airspace.

The sixth little pig said “Carbon is very strong, yes?” And built his house out of graphite and carbon nanotubes.

The wolf crept up and remarked “Buckyballs are poisonous, don’tcherknow.” and filled the ventilation shaft with them. In court he protested that the house was a health and safety violation. The team found the buckyballs and the house was demolished.

The seventh little pig said “Nitrogen is so exciting!” And built his house out of nitrogen.

The wolf crept up and moved the house to C.R.E.L.’s freezer, where upon the house shrank and the wolf flattened it.

The eighth little pig said “Oxygen is nice.” And built his house out of oxygen.

The wolf looked at the house and said “... and flammable” And put a match to the stack of firewood by the shed.

The ninth little pig said “Dried toothpaste is strong, I’ll build with fluorine.” And built his house with fluorine.

The wolf looked at the house and then went to find a giant with poor dental hygiene.

The eleventh little pig said “The wolf won’t dare exceed his recommended sodium for the day!” And built his house out of sodium.

The wolf crept up in a large fire-truck and the water set fire to the house.

The seventeenth little pig said “Let’s see that wolf handle this!” And built his house out of chlorine.

The wolf crept up, and then crept away again very quickly. The wolf crept up again with a gas mask and a knitting needle.

The twentieth little pig said “Calcium is strong enough for bones, I’ll build my house out of it.” And the twentieth little pig, having a macabre sense of humor, built his house from skulls and bones.

The wolf crept up and observed that the neighbors were not so comfortable with this. So he started a petition and the pig moved away.

The twenty-fifth little pig said “I love Magnito” And built his house with magnesium.

The wolf laughed and laughed as the pig tried to keep his house covered in oil.

The twenty-sixth little pig said “Have faith in Iron.” And built his house out of iron.

The wolf crept up and noticed that iron is very heavy. He rented a blimp and a electro-magnet and dropped the iron house into the sea.

The twenty-ninth little pig built his house out of copper, saying “I won’t have to worry about lightning!”

The wolf crept up and said “The health and safty officer will be here tomorrow.” and electrified the floor. The house was demolished.

The thirty-first little pig was oil rich and decided to build in kuwait, then he said “I’m gallant, so I’ll build with gallium!” And built her house with gallium.

The wolf crept up and said “Gallium has such a low melting point. Such a shame”. Then when Kuwait caught fire, the house melted.

The thirty-ninth little pig was a areo-space engineer, and said “I’ll take yttrium and build areo-dynamically so that the wolf can’t huff or puff to ruin my house.” And built his house out of yttrium.

The wolf crept up and was a little puzzled by this one. He went and purchased the mining rights to a near by mountain and a load of TNT. The house’s foundation mysteriously collapsed.

The fifty-third little pig was very cleanly, and said “Iodine will keep the rats out” And built his house out of iodine.

The wolf waited until he really needed a bath, and then popped the iodine house. His matted fur kept him safe.

The one-hundred-nineteenth little pig built his house out of ubdubnonium. He was the runt of the litter, and this was lucky, because there are only three atoms of ubdubnonium in exitance.

The wolf died of old age looking for it.

The End